ALGARY is beautifully situated at the foot-hills of the Rockies, at the junction of the Bow and Elbow Rivers. It is the youngest city in the Dominion, having sprung into existence a little over twenty years ago. Previous to that time it was but an Indian trading post and Mounted Police station. In 1890 its population was less than 1,000. In 1900 it had grown to about 4,000; and now it has a population of over 15,000.

Calgary is the wholesale centre for Alberta, which trade is developing with wonderful rapidity ; and is destined to be the gateway for the great grain and cattle industry of the province. It is also an important manufacturing centre, with abundant water power. Many new wholesale houses and factories are added every year.

Calgary district has also been proven to be one of the finest winter wheat-growing countries in the world—40 bushels being a common yield.

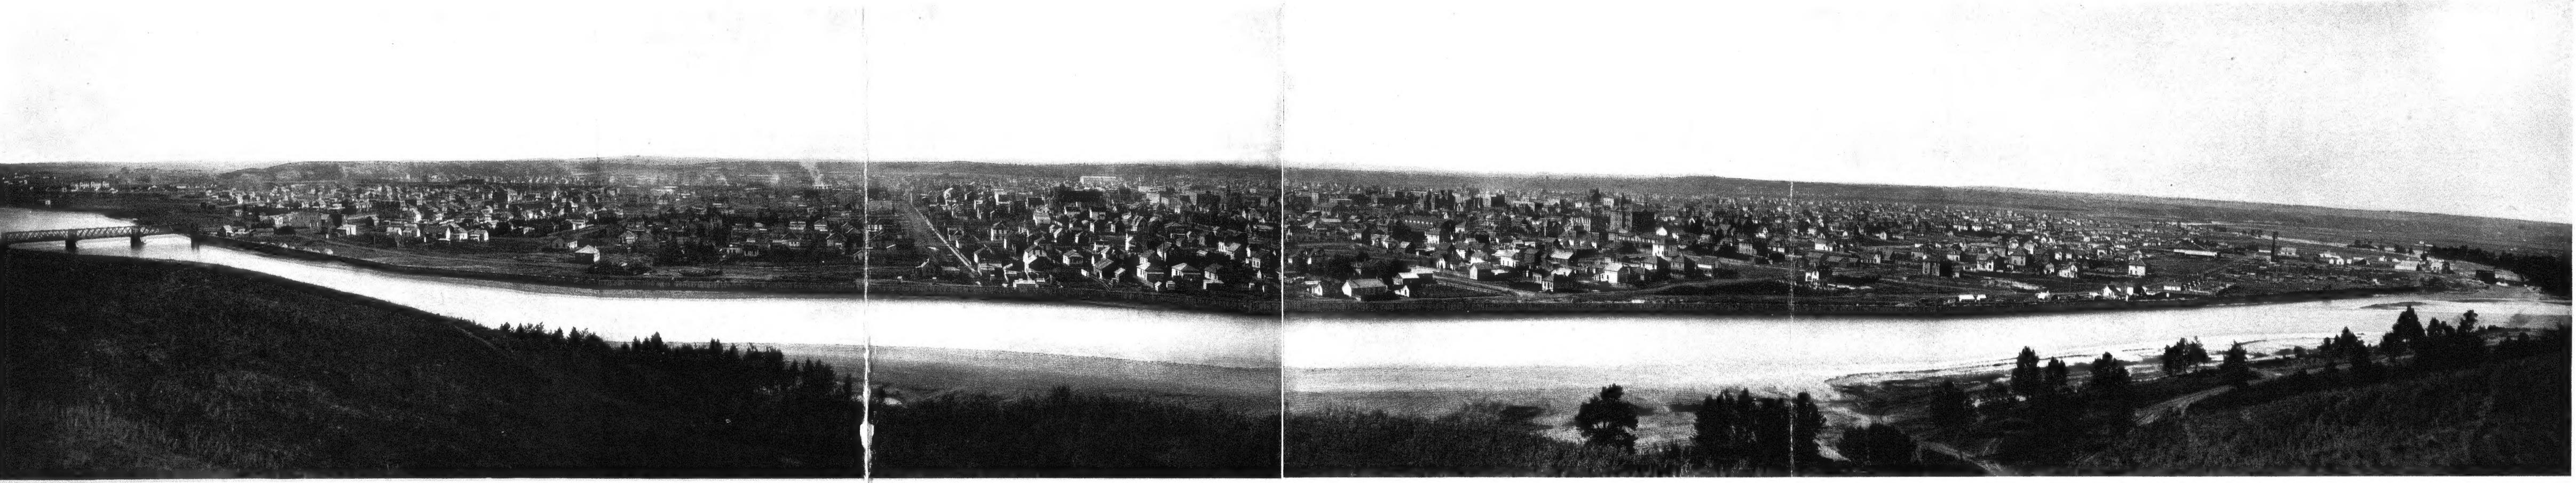

The climate in Southern Alberta is hard to surpass—unabundant sunshine, clear, dry atmosphere, and mild short winter. The city is supplied with gas, and owns its own electric light plant and waterworks, with proposed electric street car service, and private electric light plant.
